

Art in Healing Spaces

"I believe both patient and caregiver thrive in a healing environment. An integral part of healing is caring and comfort. Art is a bridge between those two factors. Inspiring, emotive art helps create a space where a hospital becomes hospitable" AO

August 2003, Aberdeen Royal Infirmary

Art in Healing Spaces

Ongoing project

Many studies conclude that art in healing spaces is integral to a successful environment to heal and be healed in. (See below) Working on projects or exhibitions within hospitals and healing spaces is something I'm always interested in considering. (click here to contact me re working on such a project) Over the past six years I've held exhibitions in hospitals in America and in the United Kingdom - including the Columbia Presbyterian Cancer clinic in New Milford, Connecticut, The Chelsea and Westminster Hospital - entrance hall gallery, London and in The Pelican Gallery at the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh.

In October 2003, I successfully completed treatment for an advanced cancer. After receiving

